

How Do They Do That?!

This new landscape of Mount Monadnock was first painted by local artist Deb Pero on 288 canvas panels tied together inside a wooden frame. When dry, each panel was selected by artists to use as miniature canvases for another picture. The technique is known as a mural-mosaic. The challenge to the artists was that they had to follow the colors, lines and hues of the panel they selected - a true partnership of talents.

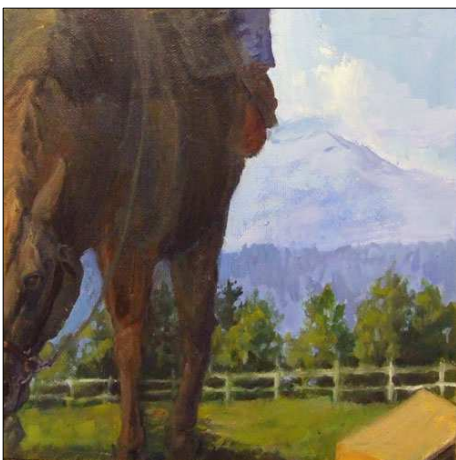

The panel selected by the artist:

What the artist sees inside the shape and color – a horse in a field leaning to the left:

The finished miniature work of art:

Would You Like To Sponsor A Panel?

To memorialize loved ones by sponsoring a panel in their names:

Visit The Park Theatre Executive Office and Visitor Center to select a panel.

Write to The Park Theatre at Post Office Box 278, Jaffrey, NH 03452.

Go online and select and order a panel at www.theparktheatre.org.

Each panel may be sponsored for $100.

(As of May 2016, a limited number of panels are still available.)

To view the complete mural and select a panel, please visit www.theparktheatre.org.

To see the mural, please visit the Healing Arts Gallery of the Monadnock Community Hospital where the mural is on exhibit while the Theatre is under construction.

The Park Theatre's Mural Project: A Legacy for our Communities

Mounted on the walls of the original Theatre were four 9-by-17 foot murals depicting Mount Monadnock when seen from the towns around the mountain during the four seasons. These murals were painted by New Hampshire muralist Carl Eric Nelson in 1941 and will be installed in the rebuilt Theatre.

As a part of the rebuilding and reopening of The Park Theatre, Trustees created a fifth mural to celebrate the future of the Theatre and to honor the four historic murals. This new mural, on the same grand scale as the original murals, is made of 288 individual panels—each one a work of art itself and depicting life in the Monadnock Region. The "Fifth Mountain Mural" will be displayed in the new Theatre lobby as a part of its permanent collection.

Steve Jackson, CEO Managing Director
The Park Theatre Executive Office and Visitor Center
6 River Street, Jaffrey—Telephone: 532-9300
Open 9 to 5 weekdays—visitorcenter@theparktheatre.org